Overview of the Error Messages from Provisioning Manager

Each message consists of a message ID and message text in the format shown below:

message-ID: KAssppmmm-z

- KAss: A character string that is identified by ss. The string indicates that this is a message or alert output by a storage subsystem.
- pp: A package serial number that indicates a message type (see Table 1-2).
- mmm: This is a message number.
- z: This is a subscript indicating the message type and message importance (see Table 1-3).

Note: Message types and reference manuals differ depending on first four characters of message IDs. The following table lists the message types and reference manuals.

Table 1-1 List of Message Types and Reference Manuals Depending on Storage Subsystems

KAIC, KAIE	Messages output by Device Manager	Hitachi Device Manager Error Codes
KAID	Alerts output by Device Manager	Hitachi Device Manager Error Codes

Message text

This is the message that is output by Provisioning Manager. When an actual message is output, applicable the character strings are displayed in place of any italicized text.

Table 1-2 Package Serial Number

Package serial number	Message type
01 – 29	Provisioning Manager server
30 – 59	Provisioning Manager GUI

Suffix	Type	Explanation
E	Error	A problem has occurred and processing cannot continue.
W	Warning	Although a problem has occurred, processing can continue under some restrictions.
I	Information	User notification that occurs under normal processing conditions.

Hitachi Storage Command Suite Common Component is abbreviated to Common Component in the message texts, causes, and actions.

If the cause is contained in the message text, no action is required, or the action is obvious, the cause and action might be indicated by a hyphen (-).
